US-CERT Warns of Breaches in 400rdb of Sensitive Data The US Computer Emergency Readiness Team has sounded the alarm on a threat affecting up to 400 gigabytes of data at South Korean industrial and commercial firms. In a report to the Department of Homeland Security, the team said that attackers could gain remote access to affected networks using various techniques and exploit multiple vulnerabilities. It said that the data loss or corruption could "result in a significant loss to the cyber-security or critical infrastructure of the affected targets." The team recommended that US businesses and governments protect themselves from the threat by stopping the export of sensitive information to unsecure networks; stopping the use of removable devices outside of approved network access; preventing the use of USB devices; and allowing only trusted devices with a valid and approved authentication or login mechanism to access sensitive information within the network.Morris said he's interested in a potential visit, but would have to meet his wife first. "If she'd be okay with it, yeah," he said. Morris and the Seahawks have agreed to a trade that would send the cornerback to the Denver Broncos, with New York Giants defensive end Olivier 3e33713323
