To increase the speed of your workflow with Photoshop, always use the Preview area and the History panel to work on a file. And be sure to use the snapshot icon in the top toolbar to create individual versions of your work (chapters 2 through 5 in this book show you how to create snapshots). Changing the Viewing Modes One of the most important features of the software is the view modes (sometimes called view options). There are four different view modes: Pixel, Grayscale, RGB, and Index. You can choose which one works best for you. Pixel view The pixel view is primarily useful for creating, editing, and correcting raster images in Photoshop. It creates a detailed, high-resolution image that you can view up close as well as zoom in and out on. You use this view mode for creating or editing high-resolution images in the RGB (color) and CMYK (color) color space. The Pixel view is extremely important for working with color imagery. However, you can use the RGB or CMYK color space if you like. (You can get the scoop on color spaces in Chapters 9 and 10.) If you want a quick and easy way to zoom in on a high-resolution image, you can also get an exact zoom by following these steps: 1. Display the image you want to zoom in on. Use the Zoom tool or another tool that enlarges the area you want to zoom in on. Don't forget to uncheck the View Options panel option for Snap to Pixel Grid to prevent problems that may occur during zoom operations. 2. Right-click to view the Zoom menu, and choose 3x (Zoom In). The image zooms in and fills the view area. You can also enable (check) or disable (uncheck) the Snap to Pixel option in the View Options panel (see Figure 3-1). 3. Use the Zoom tool to zoom in and out. The image zooms in and out to fill the view area. Figure 3-1: You can Zoom, Zoom, and Zoom again. Grayscale view If you prefer a monochromatic screen to a more colorful one, the Grayscale view mode enables you to work with a grayscale image. It creates an image that is still colorful, yet very simple and understated. By using this view mode, you

The comparison of different strategies to prevent long-term weight gain after laparoscopic adjustable gastric banding in morbidly obese women. Restoration of normal eating habits is essential for many overweight patients following restrictive bariatric surgery. The aim of the study was to compare different methods of nutritional education to ensure that patients do not gain weight after laparoscopic adjustable gastric banding (LAGB). A total of 79 overweight female patients with a mean age of 32.6 ± 7.4 years and a mean body mass index of 44.3 ± 6.6 kg/m² were included in the study. They were recruited between July 2005 and September 2007. A standard questionnaire was used to establish family size, level of education, socioeconomic status, body mass index, co-morbidities, and previous history of hypertension and diabetes before surgery. After LAGB, all patients were given a dietary advice and different methods of nutritional education. These included three counselling sessions, telephone, office, and e-mail and leaflets, or a combination of these. The patients were followed up monthly to monitor weight gain. Of the 79 overweight female patients with a mean age of 32.6 ± 7.4 years and a mean body mass index of 44.3 ± 6.6 kg/m² who were recruited, 21.5% had hypertension and 21.5% had diabetes. The mean time of the procedure was 118 ± 15.5 min. The mean percentage of excess weight loss after 12 months was $57.3 \pm 19.5\%$ (range, 9.6% to 95.4%). There was a statistically significant weight gain after 12 months (P l i m e t e r i n n a n o m e t e r s ? 2 0 0 W h a t i s 6 4 . 0 1 5 9 5 1 i n
