The best way to learn Photoshop is through a book dedicated to the topic. I recommend Mastering Photoshop CS5, by Scott Kelby, because this is the book that I used in creating all the training and tutorials in my online courses (www.totalsem.com). However, Photoshop comes with numerous learning resources within the program that I'll point out in this chapter. The best way to learn is to follow along with me as I work on the images throughout the chapter.

Organizing the Photoshop Workspace

The Photoshop workspace is where you work on your photos. You start working by choosing a new file. Photoshop creates a new folder for the file. You can preview the image on the Window tab, or you can add a new Layer. You can do anything you want to your photos in the workspace. Once you're finished, you can save the image to a different file by clicking the File menu and choosing Save As. Photoshop saves the image with the same file extension as the original. To open the file you just created, choose Open from the Window menu. Photoshop manages your resources using the Photoshop Layers panel. I show you how to add layers and change the order of layers in Chapter 3. To access the Photoshop Layers panel, click the workspace button (it's the button that looks like two half-circles near the top of the workspace window). Figure 2-5 shows a workspace window with the window title bar hidden and the Layers panel showing. FIGURE 2-5: The Layers panel is accessed by the workspace button. To change the order of the layers within the panel, drag them, as shown in Figure 2-5, or click a layer's menu and choose Show/Hide Layers to see and hide them. You see the Layers panel with a heading that lists all the layers in the image. You can create new layers, rename them, or add them to existing layers. This last method is what I show you in the next two sections. The Photoshop CS5 program offers the following Layer styles:

- Artistic: The artistic layer style is the same as the basic layer style, except it enables you to choose colors to appear on a layer.
- Clouds: This layer style gives you a way to blur and define clouds in a photo.
- Dis

Eau Claire, WI – July 17, 2013 – A report by National Geographic and J.D. Power has shown that 42 percent of people who suffered on a road trip in the US cited price as the main reason for their trip. North Carolina has been named the worst state in the US for auto-related road trip headaches. North Carolina is the only state in the US that has less than a 50/50 split of people who purchased their vehicle from an individual dealer or a dealership. According to the report, this is the reason why 42 percent of people who purchased a vehicle from a dealership say they dislike road trips in North Carolina. “We found that North Carolina gets the lowest scores for two key consumer-related measures”, said Bob Carter, senior vice president of automotive for J.D. Power. “People who purchase their vehicles from individual dealers tend to like visiting North Carolina. People who bought from a dealership were disappointed

Q: Should some major site-internals decisions be made? I am a regular reader of SO. I am a new member. I know how the system works, and I know how I can contribute to it. However, I was struck today with a question about how the site can be improved. I am familiar with the discussion on the proposals to fix Stack Exchange, but these tend to deal with sites in a rather isolated manner, while my concern concerns the integrity of the site as a whole. Let me put it like this: if one of our moderators were to create an account here on a different Stack Exchange site, and create a new question, and the question was deleted by the mod there, and the deleted question was a question asking about a problem with a major feature of the Stack Exchange system, should we also have trouble with the question here? Should some major site-internals decisions be made where different Stack Exchange sites are concerned? If so, should these be decided by the moderators of all Stack Exchange sites? A: The front page of the site lists all of the sites in the Stack Exchange Network. All of the site's tags and tagsets are listed too. This site isn't connected to the other sites at all. You are free to ask about any site. Even if you did have an account there, it wouldn't matter, the question would still be deleted and not kept available for other users here. A: On the front page of the site there is a link to the "Questions with information that is only specific to this site's topic" list. The SE folks can control what information is put on this list. A: For a serious discussion of many of the site-internals decisions, see the Meta questions: Encrypted transaction logging by default? Will we get the feature flag back? How should moderators be elected? etc. For a discussion of how some site-internals decisions affect other site-internals decisions, see: The List of Per-Site Tagging Synonyms Cheapest beer?
