There are four beliefs in the Hindu faith that are central to their philosophy of life. These four basic beliefs are as follows:- 1. Sat-chit-Ananda: The belief that there is an individual soul, the self or true self, within each and every one of us. This is called Sat-chit-ananda. A person who has this belief in himself or herself truly believes that there is a God, or God consciousness, within him or herself. This belief is the foundation upon which the whole of the Hindu philosophy of life is built. It is an absolute belief in an all-pervading spirit, which is an indivisible part of the greater cosmic spirit, the Brahman. The Hindu has no fear, for he or she knows that there is something greater than the self, and that cannot do harm to it. 2. Sanatana Dharma, the belief in the eternal law of life. The Hindu believes that life is a constant struggle with the Karma that has been accumulated through the life of one's many incarnations. Sanatana-dharma is the belief in living the life such that the ever-changing transient forms of the universe are constantly made to submit to you; the ever-changing transient forms of life are made to submit to you; the transient forms of the body are made to submit to you; the transient forms of the intellect are made to submit to you; the transient forms of the soul are made to submit to you; and the transient forms of the place in which you live, the transient forms of the society in which you live, the transient forms of the nation to which you belong, the transient forms of the religion of which you are a member, and the transient forms of your own ancestors, are made to submit to you. 3. Dharma-shastra, the belief in the existence of the laws by which the struggle for
